From the PNMC Office

In the weeks that have passed since our June gathering, there is still much to ponder and celebrate!

From Beth Landis, Hyde Park Mennonite Fellowship, Boise ID:

What was new?

- RAW Tools, a small blacksmith shop set up one evening to turn guns into garden tools, also attended by community folks
- Service projects food bank, thrift store, homeless day shelter
- Visit to Congressional offices to talk about immigration
- Pre-conference event Everence workshop on congregational giving
- An all-vegetarian menu & urban downtown setting

Highlights?

- From congregations many mentioned children, including after school programs, vacation Bible school, young families, and pastoral interns
- From worship Glen Guyton, (paraphrased) "I am not here to save Mennonite Church USA, but to support and enable congregations"
- From seminars Q and A with Glen, about his background and vision for the Mennonite Church; Congregational giving patterns, tools, trends, resources from Everence; Healthy boundaries for pastors and lay leaders; Historical society presentation with request to your congregation to preserve your stories; Journey Forward a Bible study, worship series, and small group discussion guide leading towards Kansas City Convention in 2019
- From delegate session how would we use a grant to promote healthy congregations?
- Music, laughter, conversation, and prayer

From John Gingerich, Zion Mennonite Church, Hubbard, OR:

"At the annual meeting of Pacific Northwest

Mennonite Conference in Boise, one of my highlights was getting to participate in the powerful Raw Tools service, held outdoors on a city street corner. Several unexpected gun donations showed up that evening and each one was taken to the saw, the forge, and/or the anvil on its way to transformation from a tool of death and destruction to a tool that gives and nurtures life. Local press published some fabulous photos and wrote a great article with the headline "Mennonite blacksmiths forge guns into garden tools." I thought to myself "Would THIS become the next thing Mennos were known for." So the next time someone at the airport learns I'm a Mennonite pastor, instead of asking about horses and buggies (or Mormons), they might say, "Wait... Mennonites... Are you the blacksmith people that pound guns into garden hoes?" Yes, why yes we are."

-Pastor Megan Ramer, Seattle Mennonite Church Follow link to article in Idaho Press here.

"I enjoyed the Annual Meeting; it was great to participate in the worship services and the get-acquainted workshop led by Glen Guyton, which is the primary reason which I wished to attend, and I was not disappointed. I was impressed by the Friday evening worship featuring Raw Tools, as well as the beautiful and well-chosen folk singing and meditation led by Megan Ramer. The service included stories from two women who had experienced gun violence in their families. Hearing their journey toward healing was a very meaningful and memorable experience. Conference Historian, Gloria Nussbaum led a "Blessings Shared" interactive workshop introducing participants to the history, value and examples of Ethical Wills encouraging our churches to offer leadership in writing Ethical Wills and suggesting the book "Ethical Wills; Putting Your Values on Paper" by Barry K. Baines as a textbook."

A significant part of MCC's relief work is the Meat Canning that happens throughout the year at locations east of the Rockies. Each year, nearly 600,000 pounds are canned. This year, MCC has requests for 27 containers of meat from 16 partners, but staffing is only available for ½ of the mobile canning crew. If this crew cannot be fully staffed, it may require MCC to reduce its canning capacity. The current projections forecast only being able to send 10 containers to less than 5 partners. While the canning does not take place in our region, MCC asks you to join in praying for this urgent need. Additionally, you may know someone who could serve on the crew. If so, please personally "shoulder tap" them and encourage them to apply. The job description for this role can be found here.
